Lloyd Frink will come down next Mon & Tues to do the technical learning of what programming for our environment will be.

He asked for a pc so he could try our development tools out and try out writing apps sw. I told him that's much too much to do right away and that there's very little in the way of tools to learn & see -- just a debugger.

So the plan is to set him up in a cubicle with pile of documentation and a list of folks to visit for questions and to see some demos of various pieces.

What are your thoughts on guidelines for the visit?
