

We will have a lot of work ahead of us working with the isv's early to learn what gets broken, and give them time to fix.

DRI has requested the latest version of the Windows memory management VxD - you know the one we have given quarterdeck, 386max, etc. They would include it in their 386 memory manager included in DR DOS.

They were sent an early version of the VxD. They were apparently on the Windows' group list of 3rd party memory management companies, so when they requested it, it was sent. I later learned of this and had them removed from the list. There is no level playing field for operating system competitors, in my mind.

They have recently requested the latest version. I don't want to send it to them unless legal says I have to.

If you feel differently; let me know. I thought I should run it by you.
