Does anyone know where one of these can be found?

PC Mag wants an app to crash OS/2 for their WIndows 3.1 vs OS/2 review.

We'd love to oblige them... I know steveb showed one about a year ago on press tour, but he's not responding.

thanks,

jeff

I talked with Web this morning for a couple of hours and felt them out on the terms of a proposal. Here are the basic terms and outline of proposal I think we should offer. Asterik points are text of deal, dash points are comments to you:

Source Rights

* We get non-exclusive worldwide non-transferable rights to the Web client NCP source code (full NCP stack) and rights to do any derivative works.

- they care about exclusivity and I don't think we do, so I propose non-exclusivity

The Sparta Focus Squad will now deal with Workgroup Campaign items in addition to Sparta marketing and launch.

Agenda items for Wed:

- review timing of WFW launch, Workgroup Day
- go over outline of Workgroup Day
- review WFW roll-out activities/plan

PC Mag is asking IBM for the same for Windows 3.1.

So, if we don't respond we run the risk that they come out with an article extolling the virtues of OS/2 "crash protection" while describing Windows as not quite ready for important applications/data.

Are we sure we want to engage in assisting people to do this kind of pissing that can easily backfire and end up making us look bad?
